

Food Safety Program, for Farms

Benefits for Sheep Farmers

The federal, provincial and territorial governments are investing $1.3 billion over five years into Growing Forward programs, on a cost-share basis. Growing Forward supports a profitable agriculture sector through increased competitiveness, innovation and risk management.

The Canadian Sheep Federation's Food Safe Farm Practices (FSFP) program is recognized by the Canadian Food Inspection Agency (CFIA) as the Canadian on-farm food safety program for sheep. Sheep producers can apply for up to $2,000 to offset implementation costs and for equipment that supports the FSFP program through the Growing Forward Food Safety Program, for Farms.

All Manitoba sheep producers are eligible for this program. It provides funds to establish implement and monitor food safety, biosecurity and traceability systems on farms. It helps farmers and producers identify, reduce and manage risks and anticipate ongoing demands for increased food safety practices.

Applicants to the Food Safety Program, for Farms are eligible for up to 90 per cent of the total cost of eligible equipment. Currently, the program is available for such things as single animal scales, to be used on farms.

For example:

- Up to $2,000 is available to implement the FSFP program. Eligible expenses include first audit costs or the purchase of new equipment for the program (on a 90:10 cost-share basis, with the producer paying 10 per cent). Examples of eligible equipment include single animal scales and scale for weighing animal feed and water additives. See the Approved Food Safety Equipment List on manitoba.ca/agriculture/growingforward under the Food Safety Program, for Farms link.

Please note: Sheep Herd Food Safety, Biosecurity and Traceability Assessments are available to all sheep farmers even if you have not applied to the Food Safety Program, for Farms. The assessment provides producer access to a confidential veterinarian consult at no cost to discuss the producer's herd concerns relating to food safety, biosecurity and traceability. Funding is limited and will be applied on a first-come-first-served basis. To participate, contact your local accredited veterinarian directly.

Program Timing

Usage of the current program by Manitoba producers will determine the length of time it is available (up to 2013). From the time producers receive their approval letters, they have 15 months to complete their projects. The Food Safety Program, for Farms' goal is for all Manitoba farmers and producers to have approved, up-to-date food safety systems.

For more information, see the application form which lists the terms and conditions for the program.
