George Adams is listed as one of seven passengers boarding the chartered vessel Hadlow (Captain John Davidson) at Gravesend on 2 June 1815. A Joseph Adams and his wife May likewise boarded the Hadlow at Gravesend. George Adams and Joseph Adams are listed as labourers in the log of the Hadlow. Most of the passengers, settlers for Red River, embarked in the Orkneys. The Hadlow reached York Factory in August 1815, and it seems likely that Adams was one of the colonists transported inland to Red River under the care of Peter Fidler.

In summer 1816 Adams apparently joined the employ of the Hudson’s Bay Company and spent the ensuing winter at Red Deer River Post, in the Company’s Swan River District. In spring 1817 all Hudson’s Bay Company posts in the Swan River District and all Company employees there were captured by the North West Company. Unfortunately the Swan River Post Journals for 1816-1817 have not survived to provide details. Adams was paid £20 (twenty pounds) as wages for this year’s employ with the Company, 1816-1817.

Adams apparently was not in the Company’s regular employ after 1817 but was presumably at the Red River Settlement. In 1820 he was paid £16 for two trips to York Factory. In 1823 his debit balance of £3.9.6 in the Company’s Officer’s and Servants’ York Factory Ledger was written off.
