Wife: A report of 27 August 1894 refers to him as “now married” (*D.38/34,fo.6), and a report of 1896 states that his wife came from Woswonaby. (D.38/34, fo. 14)

From comments on his character, Sclater was a hardworking and able employee, skilled in accountancy. His great drawbacks were an addiction to drink, a quick temper, which grew worse when he had been drinking, and a malicious tongue. He was also suspected of dishonesty and trading on his own account. (See, for example, D.38/7, pp.285-286 and D.38/34, fo. 4-5, 8-14.
