The Manitoba Legislative Library has the largest collection of original and microfilmed Manitoba newspapers in the world, available for use by Manitoba Government employees, researchers, educators, and students interested in the history of the province. Our newspaper collection includes rare and last copies of Winnipeg and rural Manitoba titles dating to the 19th century, as well as current issues of Winnipeg and rural Manitoba newspapers. Microfilming of Manitoba newspapers allows printed copies of newspapers to be preserved in their original state, while still providing full access to the newspaper collection to all library users.

The Library subscribes to two newspaper databases:

- AWSOM Archive, from the Manitoba Community Newspaper Association, provides searchable access to newspapers from across the province, including the Dauphin Herald, the Roblin Review and the Winkler Morden Voice. Contact Legislative Library staff at legislative_library@gov.mb.ca or visit the Library’s location at 100-200 Vaughan Street for access to AWSOM.

- ProQuest’s Canadian Newsstand Major Dailies database is available to all Manitoba Government employees, and includes full digital access to the Winnipeg Free Press from May 2006 to the present.
Librarian’s Picks

From University of Toronto Press:
For over 300 years, prairie-dwellers have been brewing, selling and sipping their beers. 300 Years of Beer is a look back at Manitoba’s long and colourful brewing past. With over 400 illustrations of rare beer labels, retro bottles and ads dating back as far as the 1870s, 300 Years of Beer chronicles the bygone days when beer barons like Patrick Shea and E.L. Drewry ruled over an industry to the modern day microbrewer and explores the events that shaped the drinking habits of Manitobans.

From Michigan State University Press:
For the Anishinaabeg people, who span a vast geographic region from the Great Lakes to the Plains and beyond, stories are vessels of knowledge. They are bagijiganan, offerings of the possibilities within Anishinaabeg life. Existing along a broad narrative spectrum, from aadizookaanag (traditional or sacred narratives) to dibajimowinan (histories and news)—as well as everything in between—storytelling is one of the central practices and methods of individual and community existence. Stories create and understand, survive and endure, revitalize and persist. They honor the past, recognize the present, and provide visions of the future. In remembering, (re)making, and (re)writing stories, Anishinaabeg storytellers have forged a well-traveled path of agency, resistance, and resurgence. Respecting this tradition, this groundbreaking anthology features twenty-four contributors who utilize creative and critical approaches to propose that this people’s stories carry dynamic answers to questions posed within Anishinaabeg communities, nations, and the world at large. Examining a range of stories and storytellers across time and space, each contributor explores how narratives form a cultural, political, and historical foundation for Anishinaabeg Studies. Written by Anishinaabeg and non-Anishinaabeg scholars, storytellers, and activists, these essays draw upon the power of cultural expression to illustrate active and ongoing senses of Anishinaabeg life. They are new and dynamic bagijiganan, revealing a viable and sustainable center for Anishinaabeg Studies, what it has been, what it is, what it can be.

From Book News:
In this case study of the politics behind genetically modified (GM) food policies in Canada, Eaton seeks answers to why Canada’s movement against GM wheat was successful and why farmers were not opposed to other GM crops. The book begins with an overview of key concepts of neoliberalism, offering background to the neoliberal discourses and policies within which farmers have waged their struggle. The book relies on 43 interviews with farmers, members of industry and farm organizations, representatives from biotech lobby groups and biochemical companies, and scientists and plant breeders.

From Chicago Distribution Center:
Place and Replace is a collection of recent interdisciplinary research into Western Canada that calls attention to the multiple political, social, and cultural labors performed by the concept of place. The book continues a long-standing tradition of situating questions of place at the center of analyses of Western Canada’s cultures, pasts, and politics, while making clear that place is never stable, universal, or static. The essays here confirm the interests and priorities of Western Canadian scholarship that have emerged over the past forty years and remind us of the importance of Indigenous peoples, dispossession, and colonialism; of migration, race and ethnicity; of gender and women’s experiences; of the impact of the natural and built environment; and the impact of politics and the state.
