The reason you walk / Wab Kinew. Toronto : Viking, 2015. 273 pages.
CT 1 Kinew, Wab Kin

From PW Annex Reviews:

Kinew, a prominent Canadian journalist, musician, and Ojibway leader, turns his immense capacity for storytelling to his own life. He begins with the story of his father, Tobasonakwut, including a childhood spent on traditional Anishinaabe lands in Ontario, abuse in an Indian residential school, his later life as an elder and elected leader, and a search for peace that takes his family across the Americas and even to Rome. The journey is familial, political, and spiritual for both father and son, spanning drug and alcohol use, failed relationships, births, adoptions, bureaucratic battles, constitutional questions, sundances, sweat lodges, and visions. In this powerfully written memoir, pivotal moments are delivered in short sentences, a style that is brilliantly clear but retains enough opacity to engender serious, fruitful thought. Kinew's father taught him that there are four meanings to the book's title phrase, all of which are "from the perspective of the Creator: 'I have created you and therefore you walk... I am your motivation.... I am the spark inside you called love, which animates you and allows you to live by the Anishinaabe values.... I am the destination at the end of your life that you are walking towards.'" By the end, readers will feel honored to know why Kinew walks, on all four levels.

Children of the broken treaty : Canada's lost promise and one girl's dream /

Charlie Angus. Regina : University of Regina Press, 2015. xix, 324 pages.
E 96.65 .O58 Ang

From the publisher:

Children of the Broken Treaty exposes a system of apartheid in Canada that led to the largest youth-driven human rights movement in the country's history. The movement was inspired by Shannen Koostachin, a young Cree woman whom George Stroumboulopoulos named as one of "five teenage girls who kicked ass in history."

All Shannen wanted was a decent education. She found an ally in Charlie Angus, who had no idea she was going to change his life and inspire others to change the country.

Based on extensive documentation assembled from Freedom of Information requests, Angus establishes a dark, unbroken line that extends from the policies of John A. Macdonald to the government of today. He provides chilling insight into how Canada--through breaches of treaties, broken promises, and callous neglect--deliberately denied First Nations children their basic human rights.

Canadian intellectuals, the Tory tradition and the challenge of modernity, 1939-1970 / Philip Massolin. Toronto : University of Toronto Press, 2001. x, 357 pages.
FC 95.4 Mas

From Book News:

Based upon Massolin's Ph.D. thesis (U. of Alberta), this text examines the process of modernization in Canada in the last century and how intellectual conservatives have attempted to resist it. The focus is on the ideas of such critics of modernity as Harold Innis, Northrop Frye, Donald Creighton, George P. Grant, and Marshall McLuhan. Massolin is a researcher with Chinook Multimedia in Edmonton.

Delta : a prairie marsh and its people / written by: Glen Suggeste, Gordon Goldsborough, Robert Jones, Winnie Pauch, Heidi den Haan, Leo Pettipas, Shirley Christianson, Barry Bills and Cynthia Jordan. Portage la Prairie, Manitoba : Delta Marsh History Group, 2015. xiii, 302 pages.
QH 106.2 M3 Sug

From the publisher:

Delta: A Prairie Marsh and Its People is a story of history and conservation.

Delta, on the south shore of Lake Manitoba, has attracted people for millennia. It was one of Manitoba's earliest cottage areas and a popular destination for generations of waterfowl hunters.

This richly illustrated, full-colour book presents the stories of the many people – Aboriginal peoples, farmers, cottagers, hunters, artists, scientists, and more – who have lived, worked, and played at Delta through the years.

Canada lives here : the case for public broadcasting / Wade Rowland.
Westmount : Linda Leith Publishing, 2015. 240 pages.
HE 8689.3 .C3 Row

From the publisher:

Canada Lives Here tells the tumultuous story of public broadcasting in Canada, from its inception in 1933 to the CBC's current, controversial attempts to adapt to collapsing revenues and new technologies. It explores in detail the struggle to preserve public space and foster community in an environment devoted to profit-making, arguing that the ideals of public service broadcasting are more relevant now than ever. Rowland, author of the influential Saving the CBC: Balancing Profit and Public Service (2013), identifies the issues crucial to the CBC's survival and proposes carefully considered policy options. This is a book for everyone who wants to understand what's really at stake with the threatened eclipse of the nation's most important cultural institution.
