

THE RETAIL SALES TAX ACT

EXEMPTION ON USED FURNITURE

- The Retail Sales Tax Act allows the following exemptions for used furniture, when purchased for domestic use:
 1. When sold by one individual to another, in a non-commercial transaction, used furniture is entirely exempted from the tax.
 2. When sold in a commercial transaction, used furniture with a selling price of $100 or less per item, per set, or in respect of the total sale, is exempted from the tax.
- To qualify as "used", the furniture must have been previously owned by a consumer.
- Used goods purchased for non-domestic (commercial) use do not qualify for the exemption, effective July 1, 2016
- The attached lists of items that are commonly found in a household have been prepared to assist businesses in applying the tax.

List "A" - shows examples of household items which are regarded to be furniture for the purpose of this exemption.

List "B" - shows examples of household items that are not considered to be furniture, and are taxable when sold commercially, regardless of their price.
- Baby furniture and certain other goods and accessories used to care for babies are fully exempt from tax. Examples include cribs, playpens, strollers, safety gates, see Bulletin 055 – Baby Supplies for further information.
