Agreement to Change Maintenance Obligations

Effective July 1, 2019, the parties to an order (debtor and creditor) can change the maintenance obligations in their order for enforcement purposes by completing and submitting an Agreement to Change Maintenance Obligations for either spousal or child support. The Agreement to Change Maintenance Obligations form allows the Maintenance Enforcement Program (MEP) to administer the support as represented in the Agreement. Once the Agreement is received by the MEP, the account will be adjusted and the parties notified of the corresponding account adjustments.

Please note that the MEP can only give effect to the Agreement if fully completed and signed by both parties and the instructions within are clear and enforceable by the MEP. The parties will be advised in writing if the MEP cannot administer the changes requested in the form.

To change child support obligations being enforced by the MEP complete and submit the Agreement to Change Child Support Obligations.

To change spousal support obligations being enforced by the MEP complete and submit the Agreement to Change Spousal Support Obligations.

Terminating a Maintenance Agreement

The Agreement to Change Maintenance Obligations may be terminated in writing by either party by completing and submitting the Termination of Agreement to Change Maintenance Obligations. Upon receiving notice from one or both of the parties, the MEP will resume enforcement of the support obligations set out in the prior maintenance order and the parties will be notified in writing of any resulting account adjustments.

An Agreement to Change Maintenance Obligations does not change your court ordered obligations, it only changes the amount which the MEP may enforce. To change your court ordered support obligation, it is necessary to vary your order.
