TRANSCRIPT FOR UNPAID LEAVES

Time: 5 minutes

Employment Officer: Good afternoon, Employment Standards

Employer: Hello, I'm a new employer. I would like some information about leaves... Am I phoning the right place?

Employment Officer: Yes you are.

Employer: Could you explain the different types of leaves to me please?

Employment Officer: Yes I can. There are ten different leaves available to employees. There's maternity leave, parental leave, family leave, compassionate care leave, bereavement leave, reservist leave, leave for organ donation, leave for citizenship ceremony, leave related to the death or disappearance of a child, and leave related to the critical illness of a child.

Employer: Okay, can you explain to me the purpose of each leave?

Employment Officer: Of course I can. I'll start with maternity leave; maternity leave allows for pregnant women to take time some off work so they can rest and take it easy while they are pregnant and for recovery after giving birth.

Employer: So only for the woman.

Employment Officer: That's right.

Employer: Okay. What about parental leave and family leave?

Employment Officer: The parental leave is for both the mother and the father to take care of the new-born baby or a newly adopted child. New mothers that wish to take both leaves, must take their maternity leave and parental leave one right after the other. The family leave lets an employee take time off if they are sick or if they have a family responsibility.

Employer: So, if my employee has to attend a parent teacher conference at their child's school, for example, they can use a family leave day.

Employment Officer: That's right, employees may use the family leave even if they are not sick, but they have to, for example, take their child to the doctor, or, like you said, a parent-teacher conference at school. The bereavement leave can be taken if an employee's family member passes away. They can take some time off to prepare for the funeral, and to grieve. The reservist leave can be taken by an employee who is a member of the Reserves and is required to be away from work for the purpose of active duty or training in the Reserves. The compassionate care leave is for an employee to take care of a family member that's very, very sick, and has a good chance of dying within the next 26 weeks.

Employer: Okay, now how about the leave for organ donation and the leave for citizenship ceremony?

Employment Officer: The leave for organ donation can be taken by an employee who needs time off for surgery and to recover from surgery after donating an organ or tissue to another person. The leave for citizenship ceremony lets an employee take up to four hours of leave to attend a citizenship ceremony to receive a certificate of citizenship. The last two leaves are for parents if their child unfortunately has disappeared or has died due to a crime, or if their child is critically ill.

Employer: Okay, so let me see if I've got this straight. Maternity for the woman...

Employment Officer: Right.

Employer: Parental for the man and the woman, for taking care of the baby.

Employment Officer: That's right.

Employer: Family leave is for an employee's sick child, or some other kind of an appointment, family related.

Employment Officer: That's right.

Employer: Compassionate care, is to take care of a family member who is really sick, maybe about to die.

Employment Officer: That's right.

Employer: Bereavement leave for a funeral, and reservist leave for serving in the army. Leave for organ donation is for someone who is donating an organ or tissue, and the citizenship ceremony leave is for someone to take time off and get their citizenship certificate. Leave for death or disappearance of a child for the parents if their child goes missing or is murdered, and if their child is critically ill, there is the leave related to critical illness of a child.

Employment Officer: That's right.

Employer: Okay, I'm also wondering, what is the length of time for each leave.

Employment Officer: Okay, for maternity leave, is 17 weeks, the parental leave is 37 weeks, the compassionate care leave is a maximum of 8 weeks, the bereavement leave is a maximum of three days, and the family leave is a maximum of three days per year, the reservist leave is for as long as they are serving in the army, leave for organ donation is 13 weeks, and the leave for citizenship ceremony is up to a maximum of 4 hours. Leave for death or disappearance of a child is 104 weeks long for parents of a child who has died, 52 weeks for parents whose child is missing. Leave related to critical illness of a child is 37 weeks long.

Employer: Now if I forget all these, these details, are they on the website?

Employment Officer: Oh, certainly, yes they are.

Employer: Yeah, because I might need to double check some of them later on.

Employment Officer: Oh, we do all the time as well.

Employer: Okay, good, now, let me see, I've asked you to explain the leaves and now I know how long they are, but I don't know how long do the employees have to work for me, before they're qualified to take these leaves.

Employment Officer: For the maternity, parental, and Reservist leave, an employee has to work for you for at least seven months before they qualify to take the leave..

Employer: Um humm.

Employment Officer: For the family, compassionate care, bereavement, organ donation, citizenship ceremony leaves, leave related to the death or disappearance of a child or related to the critical illness of a child,, the employee must have worked for you for at least 30 days to qualify to take those leaves

Employer: So, if my employee has been with me less than thirty days, they really are not qualified for any leaves.

Employment Officer: Right, they don't qualify for it. Even less than seven months, they don't qualify for the maternity, parental, or Reservist leaves.

Employer: Okay. And are these leaves paid or unpaid?

Employment Officer: You don't have to pay them, but your employees may want to contact Employment Insurance, with the Federal Government, as they may be able to pay them while they are on the leave.

Employer: Oh, and I forgot, I had a question a while back. Who are considered family members? If you say, a family leave is to take care of a family member, how do you define family member?

Employment Officer: It's a very, very big definition. It can include your mother, father, brother, sister, cousins, aunts, uncles, nieces, nephews, step children, and anyone you might consider family even if they are not related to you...

Employer: How about the cat?

Employment Officer: The cat, no. That's going too far.

Employer: Okay. Yeah, and you said there were employment programs to pay the employees. Yes, by the federal government of Canada: Employment Insurance.

Employer: Okay, I think those are, those are all my questions. Can I contact you if I need to know anything else?

Employment Officer: Anytime, give us a call.

Employer: Thanks

Employment Officer: Bye Bye.

READING ABOUT UNPAID LEAVES

READING A: MATERNITY LEAVE

Maternity leave gives expectant mothers the opportunity to take unpaid leave from work, without the fear of job loss. Maternity leave and Parental leave are different. Maternity leave is an unpaid leave, taken near the end of a pregnancy or immediately afterwards. Parental leave is taken by fathers and mothers to care for a child after birth or adoption.

To qualify for maternity leave, employees must have worked with the same employer for at least seven consecutive months and must be expecting to give birth to a child. The leave is up to 17 weeks long.

The legislation doesn't require the employers to pay for the leave; it only requires employers to provide time off and to allow employees to return to their job when the leave has ended. Employers are not required to pay wages during the leave. Employers can, and often will, give greater benefits than those provided for in the legislation.

The federal government provides programs through Employment Insurance (EI) to cover this type of leave. Please check with your local EI office or call 1-800-206-7218 for details.

Maternity leave can begin up to 17 weeks before the expected date of the birth. Generally, the leave will end 17 weeks after it began. The latest that a leave can last is 17 weeks after the birth.

COMPREHENSION QUESTIONS:

1. Who qualifies for maternity leave?
2. How long is maternity leave?
3. Does the employer pay during the leave?
4. Are there programs to pay employees during the leave?
5. When can an employee start her maternity leave?
6. When must employees end maternity leave?

READING ABOUT UNPAID LEAVES

READING B: MATERNITY LEAVE. Employees requesting maternity leave (or parental leave) must give their employers at least four weeks' written notice before the leave. They must also provide a medical certificate indicating the estimated date of delivery.

Expectant mothers are still entitled to maternity leave if they fail to give four weeks written notice. Within two weeks of stopping work, employers must receive a medical certificate stating the expected date of delivery and noting any dates the employee was unable to work because of the pregnancy in the 17 weeks before the expected date of birth. This time missed from work can be included in the maternity leave.

At the end of maternity leave, employees may take parental leave. Mothers must take maternity and parental leave one after the other. They cannot take their maternity leave, return to work, and then take the parental leave.

Employees who want to return to work before their leave has ended must give their employers notice, in writing, at least two weeks or one pay period before returning to work, whichever is longer.

If the employee's same job is not available, a comparable position with the same pay and benefits must be offered. In special circumstances, employers may not have a position available for reasons completely unrelated to the leave. For example, if employers shut down part of their operations and reduce their workforce based on a seniority system, employees who are on unpaid leave would not necessarily be protected from losing their jobs.

Employers must be able to show that the leave has no impact on the decision to lay off or terminate the employment.

Employees who believe they were terminated because they took or requested leave may file a claim with Employment Standards. Employers who do not allow employees to return to work after a leave may be ordered to pay compensation, and, in some cases, reinstate employees to their jobs.

COMPREHENSION QUESTIONS:

1. How do employees start the maternity leave?
2. What if employees do not give the required notice?
3. What happens when maternity leave ends?
4. How do employees start parental leave after maternity leave?
5. What if employees want to end the leave early?
6. What if the employee's job is no longer available?
7. What if employers refuse to bring employees back to work?

READING C: PARENTAL LEAVE

Parental leave gives parents the opportunity to take an unpaid leave from work, to care for a new child in their family, without the fear of job loss. Maternity leave is taken by mothers. It is an unpaid leave, taken near the end of a pregnancy or immediately afterwards. Parental leave is taken by fathers and mothers to care for a child after birth or adoption.

Both the mother and the father are eligible to take their own 37 week unpaid parental leave. However, Employment Insurance only provides benefits for one 37 week period, and in reality, many fathers and mothers choose to share one 37 week parental leave, so that they will receive some unemployment income.

Employees who have worked with the same employer for at least seven consecutive months and have become a parent by birth or adoption are entitled to the leave. Parental leave is up to 37 weeks long and must be taken in one continuous period.

The employer is not required to pay for the leave. The legislation only requires employers to provide time off and allow employees to return to their job when the leave has ended. Employers are not required to pay wages during the leave. Employers can, and often will, give greater benefits than those provided for in the legislation.

COMPREHENSION QUESTIONS:

1. What is the difference between maternity leave and parental leave?
2. Many couples only claim one full 37 week parental unpaid leave, and not two. Why?
3. Who qualifies for parental leave?
4. How long is parental leave?
5. Does the employer pay during the leave?

FAMILY LEAVE

Family leave allows employees unpaid time off, to deal with family responsibilities or personal illness, without fear of job loss. The legislation provides three unpaid days per year as family leave. Many employers give greater benefits than those provided for in the legislation, such as more days off or paid leave.

COMPREHENSION QUESTIONS:

6. What is family leave?
7. How long is family leave?

READING ABOUT UNPAID LEAVES

READING D: FAMILY LEAVE All employees employed for at least 30 days with the same employer are entitled to this leave.

Employees are not required to be paid for the family leave days. The legislation only requires employers to provide time off and allow employees to return to their job when the leave has ended. Employers can, and often do, give greater benefits than those provided for in the legislation.

Family is defined very broadly for unpaid leave. Children, brothers, sisters, stepchildren, parents, grandparents, spouses, common law spouses, brothers, sisters, step-brothers, step-sisters, aunts, uncles, nieces and nephews are all considered family. The definition also includes those who are not related, but are considered a family member.

Employees can take family leave to deal with personal illness or the needs of their family. In some situations, this can be arranged in advance, but in others, that is not possible. Employees must provide their employer with as much notice as reasonable and practical. They must also provide reasonable verification that the leave is necessary, if requested by the employer.

Employees are entitled to the leave to deal with family responsibilities or personal illness. What may be required as verification will be different from case to case. For example, a doctor's note may be needed in some cases, but not in others. The intent is to reasonably confirm that the employee is dealing with their needs or the needs of their family during the leave.

Each year employees are eligible for three days of leave but it does not carry over to future years.

When an employee takes a leave, the employer may consider the employee off for the entire day. Employers and employees can make arrangements for part days of leave, but there is no obligation for the employer to accommodate part days.

COMPREHENSION QUESTIONS:

1. Who is eligible to take family leave?
2. Are employees paid while on family leave?
3. Who are considered family members?
4. When can employees take family leave?
5. What is considered reasonable verification?
6. Can employees who do not take any family leave this year, use six days next year?
7. Can employees take part of a day as family leave?

READING ABOUT UNPAID LEAVES

READING E: Read about the two leaves, and compare how they are the same or different on the chart below.

COMPASSIONATE LEAVE: Compassionate care leave provides employees the opportunity to assist a family member who is critically ill and requires care and support for several weeks. Compassionate leave is up to eight weeks long, and it is an unpaid leave. Employees who have worked with the same employer for at least 30 days qualify for this leave.

Employees must provide a certificate from a doctor indicating that a family member has a serious medical condition, has a significant risk of death in the next 26 weeks and needs care and support.

Employees can take the leave to care for and support a family member without the fear of job loss. Employees can take the leave in one or two periods. Each period must be at least one week long. The need for this type of leave is unpredictable. Generally, employees must give one pay period of notice before the leave. They must provide their employer with a doctor's certificate as soon as possible. Employees are still entitled to compassionate care leave even if they are unable to give notice. Employees who wish to return to work before their leave has ended must give their employer 48 hours' notice that they are returning to work.

BEREAVEMENT LEAVE: Bereavement leave allows employees unpaid time off to deal with the death of a family member, without fear of job loss. Employees who have worked for an employer for 30 days qualify for Bereavement Leave.

Employees are allowed up to three unpaid days as Bereavement Leave for the death of a family member. As with all the leaves, employees who want to take bereavement leave don't need permission. However, they must provide employers with as much notice as possible.

An employer can request reasonable verification of the family member's death. This will be different in every situation. For example, an obituary from a local newspaper could reasonably verify the need for this leave.
